Science is the essence of almost everything which is present in the world. Basically, science is a very systematic and a logical manner in order to discover how certain things are taking place in the universe and how some things work. Science is also about the knowledge and discoveries which are so much related to the universe and the solar system. Science is basically the knowledge with which is based on a mission which can be demonstrated and reproduced. This means that if there is a theory then that theory should be demonstrated in such a way that others can understand it. The theory should be reproducible, which means that if the theory is correct but somehow there are few hours then that theory can be reproduced by eliminating those areas with existing in the first place. Science is not something which is based on the opinion of different people or their preferences or choices, but science is something which totally depends and based on the facts. The scientific methods are very important and significant in order to prove and understand a theory. The scientific method plays a great role in understanding a variety of theories and laws.
